Conference prepares SSU students to lead

By Ed Darrah
OA Guest Writer

Dick Howard, vice president of student services, addressed students interested in serving on the student senate or student committees at SSU at a student leadership conference on Sept. 23.

Howard spoke of the present status of the university as it has evolved into a four-year institution. Howard said his goal for the university is to have excellence in all phases of activities and operations.

Fred Chrisman, director of student activities, was conference chairman.

During a three-hour break-out session, concerns and problems relating to students' organizations were brought to Chrisman's attention.

John Ketter, who has more than 20 years experience with college student organizations, was the guest speaker.

Three issues raised at the break-out session were:

- Concern with the natatorium's policy of charging a user's fee to students.

- The possibility of completing a student profile that would permit SSU to better understand the student body.

- The need for a day-care center for student's children.

Chrisman said he would investigate the natatorium's user fee. "Some students are paying to use the natatorium twice," Chrisman said, "and, if you pay either state or federal taxes, you are paying three times."

Chrisman said his office will develop a complete student profile which will provide a statistical analysis that will permit SSU to anticipate the future requirements of all students. This profile will include age, sex, marital status and information on dependents, he said.

Chrisman led a discussion to develop ideas for a day-care facility. Chrisman said he will ask the Community Action Organization of Scioto County to consider a grant to fund a day-care center. He suggested a center that would be open during all school hours, that would permit students to attend either day or night classes, and that would be licensed.

Chrisman said he anticipates the student activities office will conduct leadership conferences at least annually during the first week of fall quarter. Participants at the meeting recommended a conference be held the first week of each quarter.

The student senate, special events committee, Phi Theta Kappa, Spanish Club, Accounting Club and Campus Ministry were groups represented at this year's conference.

Are cavemen really extinct?

Commentary by

Tim Parsley

OA Staff Writer

The purpose of this university is to educate, but it has shown me there is still a lot of male and female image stereotyping present, even in our enlightened community.

We have been conditioned throughout history to the status of the male as the predominant leader in society. However, over the years, females have succeeded in gaining some well-deserved rights. But, some men and some women have had trouble adjusting.

The thing that bothered me about a recent date-rape seminar was that in an audience of about 35 to 40 people, there were only two men present, including myself.

The point was also missed somewhat in the "Male-Bashing" debate in last week's Point/Counterpoint (The Open Air, Oct. 3, pg. 3). The television shows in question are produced for a predominantly female audience and focus on their problems and concerns.

Women involved in relationships with decent, honest men who treat them with respect, don't need as much help as women involved with abusers, alcoholics or child molesters.

These shows inform some of the women in these situations of the availability of assistance. For this the shows are greatly needed.

The shows may give the wrong impression to the male viewer. The topics aren't presented to be anti-male, it's just that men aren't the target audience.

Women have had to go through thousands of years of subjugating themselves to men, and they are just recently, in the scheme of things, getting a chance to air their complaints and try to find solutions to them. There would have to be some anger.

Think of it this way: Men, imagine yourselves performing a job you hate. Your boss controls your financial existence, tells you what to do, and is probably no better at your job than you are.

Imagine thousands of years of that. Don't you think you would want a change?

There are men who consider male feminists spineless, but that doesn't concern me.

Cavemen are extinct — and the caveman mentality should be too.

Elevator consideration asked

Commentary by

Latricia Sessor

OA Assignment Editor

The fall term has begun, and along with it a lot of new students have arrived who are not aware of the problems we have with the elevator in Massie Hall.

The elevator isn't supposed to be for the use of the general public. It is for those students, faculty and staff that can't climb stairs due to physical impairments. The elevator is also to be used for delivery of goods and items that are too heavy to haul up several flights of stairs.

The elevator is supposed to be locked and keys issued to those who need to use it. A doctor's certificate or other proof of need is supposed to be required before an elevator key is issued. For those eligible, a key may be obtained from the provost's office by paying a $3 deposit.

The elevator isn't locked at this time. I do not know why. Mary Beaumont, counselor for handicapped students, says she has requested the elevator be locked.

Being a wheelchair person, I have waited for as long as 20 minutes to get on the elevator. The elevator isn't adequate to serve the student body, and it is poorly ventilated, but it is the only way a wheelchair person can get upstairs. So, until we have a better one, some consideration from the walking students would certainly be helpful.

I don't think it is too much to expect from those able to use the stairs to do so. And, for those new students who weren't aware of what the sign by the elevator means: "Only Authorized Persons Permitted to Ride Elevator."

Rase a good athlete

By Leslie Smith

OA Staff Writer

Lois Rase said she went into teaching athletics because she is a good athlete. "I'm just good at it," she said. "I've always been interested in physical activity and sports, therefore it seemed only natural to go into physical education."

Rase has been teaching tennis, aerobics conditioning and weight training at SSU since June.

She also teaches basketball officiating at the Southern Ohio Correctional Facility.

Rase is optimistic about SSU's future. "So far," she said, "most of the faculty and staff have been very helpful. The students are cooperative and sincere. Also everyone seems to be working together to overcome the problems faced by beginning universities."

Rase received a bachelor's degree in elementary education and a master's degree in physical education, both from Ohio University. She taught physical education at Central Florida University in Ocala, Fla.

In her spare time Rase participates in gymnastics and dance, and one of her goals, she said, is to start a gymnastics program at SSU.

To smoke, or not to smoke?

By Alice Kimbler

OA Staff Writer

Although some students say they would like to have less smoking in campus buildings, the administration says its smoking policy is based on Ohio law.

"Our present policy is in compliance with section 3791.03 of the (Ohio) Revised Code, under 9.801 Designated Smoking Areas," says Neil Hawk, vice president for business and finance.

Hawk says classrooms and laboratories, the library and bookstore, public office areas and the elevators have been designated as non-smoking areas.

Smoking is permitted in restrooms, private offices, the cafeteria, lounge area," says Joe Triplett. "I understand the smoker's problem. Cigarettes are an addictive drug and not having one for a long period of time can cause stress," Triplett says.

Julia Basham, associate professor of biology science, says she has asked students to extinguish their cigarettes while on the elevators. "The elevators are definitely no place for smoking cigarettes," she says.

Dr. Frank Byrne, associate professor of linguistics, says, "Smoke from cigarettes is a rude imposition on nonsmokers; there is evidence that residual smoke affects nonsmokers. There should be designated areas (for smokers)."

areas, and the board room, he says.

Some students say smokers have rights the same as non-smokers. "I enjoy smoking and I smoke on every break," says Mike Chandler, a sophomore business management major. "I feel courtesy is a main factor to keep in mind when smoking."

Cheryl Wright, another student, notes there are no cigarette vending machines on campus. She is in favor of students smoking in defined areas only, she says.

A Special Events Committee member is not in favor of sharing space with smokers. "I am a non-smoker and I don't appreciate being forced to breathe smoke-filled air in a confined

SSU is updating the total smoking policy, Hawk says. SSU is studying college smoking policies such as those at the University of Cincinnati, Kent State University, Wright State University, Ohio University and Ohio State University. Changes may be made to parallel with the other universities' guidelines, Hawk says.

And, some action to control smoking has already been taken by the students' representatives on campus, according to Dave Nelson, student senate vice-president last year. A request from the student senate prompted the designation of non-smoking areas in the cafeteria, he says.

And Fred Chrisman, director of student activities, says, "The student senate has followed suit in designating separate areas for smokers

PTK s get recognized

Phi Theta Kappa, a nationally recognized honorary scholastic fraternity for men and women, was founded in 1918. PTK exists to encourage leadership and service among students in colleges such as SSU.

To be eligible to join PTK, a student must:

- Be enrolled in a qualified institution of higher learning.

- Be a full-time student.

- Achieve a grade point average of "B" or 3.00 out of 4.00.

Being a member of PTK acknowledges that a student has achieved a recognized scholastic standard. This may work to a student's advantage with future employers and when applying for admission to programs of advanced degrees.

PTK members at SSU have received scholarships to purchase books as the local group's budget allowed.

Each PTK member is eligible to serve as an officer providing opportunities for leadership experience.

Members receive The Golden Key, the official publication of PTK, during the period of their active membership.

In addition, members receive a newsletter that includes the yearly calendar, honor theme bibliography, reports of chapter activities and timely communiques from the executive director.

SSU advisers to PTK are Stephen Midkiff, Commons Building, room 103; Linda Wooddell, Allied Health, room 119; and Betty Hodgden, Business Annex, room 125.

SSU women's volleyball takes three

By Marty Cooper
OA Sports Editor

SSU took three out of four sets from Thomas Moore College in volleyball competition in the activities center Oct. 1.

The Bears won the first set 15-7, lost the second 15-2, but then rallied in the next two sets 15-12, 15-13, to take the victory.

The Bears were led by an outstanding performance from Lori Leach who had 15 points. Keisha Lynch added 12 points to help lead the Bears to their 10th victory of the season.

The Bears have completed half of their volleyball season with a 10-7 record, and Thomas Moore drops to 2-12.

"We are more than pleased with our season so far and we keep improving every game," said Tom Bowman, head volleyball coach.

The Bears will go back out on the prowl to take on Kentucky Christian College at 6 p.m. on Tuesday, Oct. 11 at KCC.

Michaels "monkeys" around

By Kurt Kegly

OA Staff Writer

The Faith tour arrived in Lexington, Ky. Sept. 11 for an unforgettable two-hour show. The concert spotlighted George Michael's great talents as a singer, dancer and all around entertainer using the latest advances in laser, computer, light and sound technology.

At 9 p.m. the sold out crowd waited impatiently, cheering for Michael. Then the lights grew dim and the cheering grew to a roar. The organ prelude to "Faith" began to play as the curtain rose to reveal the stage, which resembled a giant cage.

Michael appeared beneath the lasers and lights and opened the show with the controversial, "I Want Your Sex."

Andrew Ridgely's absence was hardly noticed as Michael superbly reprised the Wham! hits, "Everything She Wants" and "I'm Your Man." The pace slowed down for excellent renditions of the ballads "Father Figure," "Careless Whisper" and "A Different Corner."

Michael ended the show with cover versions of Wild Cherry's "Play that Funky Music" and "Lady Marmalade" by Labelle. The curtain then fell and the audience still wanted more, but, nonetheless, the show was over.

This show was one of the top grossing concerts of the week, taking in $350,000. Not bad for a day's work.
