Metamorphosis

This house: my prison, my own private hell.
I am trapped.
A free spirit enslaved.

Which prison?
Loneliness inside these cold, cold walls,
Or in the flaming passion of my desires outside?

Would that free me,
Or only bind me to another hell?
Is there no middle ground?

Is there no happiness, no fulfillment, in life?
Is this all there is?
Is there no joy? No hope? No loving?

Why must what feels good be forbidden?
Have I not the right to feel?
I merely exist from day to day.
Monotonous, mechanical duties and smiles.

Oh, to live! To enjoy, to feel;
To touch another person.
To laugh naturally, because it feels good.
To run, and play.
To smell freshly mown grass
And run my fingers through his hair!
To make love eighty-seven different ways!

Indeed, why not?
